Current Comment

Some newspapers of so-called liberal or socialistic tendencies have hailed the recent trend to the left in the French elections as an indication that conservative strength is on the wane in parts of the world. Election Europe, as well as in other results during the past year or so, in various countries of the globe do not bear out this assertion.

In Great Britain the decisive defeat of the radicals and the election of the conservative party to power, is still fresh in the memory of almost everyone. In Germany the trend seems to have been decidedly away from communism, and toward the brand of nationalism which the Hitlerites seem to represent. And while there seems to be a drift in France to the left the trend is by no means so marked as many observers would have us believe.

The fact is, because of the world-wide depression, the tendency everywhere has been to turn out those who are in power and give the opts a chance. The voters have cast their ballots not so much for or against conservatism as against the party in power.

The labor party has made a mess of things in Great Britain, due in part, of course, to the depression. As a result, when the crisis came the Labor party suffered what amounted almost to temporary elimination. Conditions in Germany have been going from bad to worse ever since the depression descended upon the world and the government of the middle parties has been suffering as a result. It has been the condition of the people and not any love for Hitler or confidence in his proposals, which has made the rise of the Hitler party in Germany so spectacular. Indeed, had it not been for the powerful hold which President Von Hindenburg has upon the German people, there is little doubt but that Hitler would have been elected president of the Reich.

In France the moderate conservatives were in power, and as France is now beginning to feel the depression at its worst it was only natural that the party in power would be punished and gains be registered by the socialists. This tendency of the voters everywhere to punish the party in power in times of stress has brought about governmental changes everywhere and it is the chief hope of the Democratic party in the United States this year.

Similar conditions are said to have brought about an unusual situation in Wisconsin this year. The so-called progressive government in that state during the past several years has greatly increased the functions of government and this has resulted in higher and higher taxes. While the people were prosperous and contented they paid their taxes, believing they were getting something for their money. But now that the depression has hit Wisconsin as well as other parts of the United States there are rumors of political revolt. In recent contests the conservatives won the majority of delegates to the Republican national convention, and there are reports from competent political observers to the effect that the La Follette machine is in danger of losing out at the hands of the people of Wisconsin, who have found that too much government in business is pretty expensive after all.

C. OF C. PROTESTS LOCAL TEACHERS' PAY REDUCTION

The Campbell Chamber of Commerce held its regular Monthly meeting last Tuesday evening. One of the features of the session was the dictation of a letter to the high school board of trustees protesting the 40 per cent teachers' wage slash demanded by the so-called Community Welfare League. The letter suggested that such a cut would have far-reaching and damaging results, and would tend to demoralize the entire district.

It was voted that the high school be given $25 towards the making of a float for the fiesta parade Saturday. Members of the organization are also offering their services.

Two years ago paint was given the Chamber for the purpose of painting the word "Campbell" on the roof of the Hyde cannery. Bids are now being asked for the painting of the air sign.

Rev. Buell, secretary, has a number of handsomely printed booklets on the Santa Clara valley, which he says he will be glad to mail to addresses supplied by local people.

Modern Plays Topic At Meet Of Woman's Club Here Monday

Mrs. F. L. Howes was in charge of the program for the meeting of the Country Woman's club Monday. No topic had been designated in the year book so she had chosen some of the best plays of 1929-30 and 1930-31 to review, devoting the greater part of the time to those of the past year.

In opening the subject she remarked that a survey of the more recent popular plays seems to indicate that the drama is emerging from the slough through which it has been struggling since the war.

In examining the list of best plays for the years since 1919, one by Eugene O'Neil had appeared on seven of them, but none for last year. The following plays were then more or less completely sketched, and a few short scenes read: "Elizabeth the Queen," Maxwell Anderson; "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," Philip Barry; "Green Grow the Lilacs," Lynn Riggs; "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Rudolph Besier; and of the 1929-30 dramas, "Berkeley Square," John Balderston; "Death Takes a Holiday," Walter Ferris; "Michael and Mary," A. A. Milne, and "Mourning Becomes Electra," Eugene O'Neil.

The main points of the business meeting were the reports of the auditing committee, and making arrangements for the annual picnic for the sixth of June. Los Gatos civic park has been chosen for the event, and members are especially urged to attend as the location is so convenient. The members will assemble at the library and there will be transportation for all. Each one will provide their own dishes and silver, sandwiches and a table dish. Coffee, sugar and cream will be provided.

The Sea Scouts will have a float in the fiesta parade this Saturday. This is the fourth entry they have made, having previously won two second places and one first in their class. They will have a marching unit of scouts in conjunction with the float.

Col. Lindbergh's Baby Is Found Murdered—Senators Drop Political Squabbles to Revive Mr. Hoover's Economy Program.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S stolen baby was murdered, probably soon after the kidnaping. The body of the infant, badly decomposed and with fractures of the skull, was found, partly covered with leaves and debris, near a road in the Sourland hills less than five miles from the Lindbergh estate. Physicians said the little boy had been dead for at least two months. He was stolen from his nursery on the night of March 1.

The finding of the body was accidental. It was discovered by William Allen, a negro truck driver, and three companions who stopped by chance at that particular place and, stepping into the woods, discovered the little skeleton. Identification was soon established by the fragments of clothing, the nurse, Betty Gow, assisting in this. The skull was fractured on both sides, one break possibly being a bullet hole.

With the finding of the baby's body the authorities were freed from all restraint in their efforts to capture the kidnapers and murderers. Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, said they had a group of persons under suspicion and that immediate steps would be taken to accomplish their arrest. The search for these cruelest criminals is country-wide and it is certain no mercy will be shown them if they are caught.

UNDOUBTEDLY senators and representatives have been hearing from the home folks as well as from President Hoover on the matter of legislation designed to reduce government expenditures and to balance the budget. In the senate, at least, politics began to give way to common sense and recognition of the national needs, and Mr. Hoover was highly gratified with the developments. The senate decided to set up a new economy committee, proposed by the Democrats, and on it were named three members of each major party. Senator Wesley Jones of Washington, Republican, was made chairman, the other members being Bingham of Connecticut and Dickinson of Iowa, Republicans; and Byrnes of South Carolina, McKellar of Tennessee and Bratton of New Mexico, Democrats.

Sen. Jones

The President immediately invited these gentlemen to breakfast with him and they all discussed plans to salvage the economy bill which the house ruined and to speed up the passage of the revenue raising bill which was being debated in the senate.

Savings of more than $2,030,000,000 are regarded necessary by the administration above its cut of $369,000,000 in the budget estimates for next year. This curtailment should permit the $1,000,000,000 tax bill to make ends meet in 1933.

Mr. Hoover re-emphasized his belief in the furlough plan of "staggering" federal employment as opposed to the house provision for a straight 11 per cent cut in federal salaries above $2,500. Under his proposition, he believes, $55,000,000 will be saved next year while thousands of workers will be enabled to hold their positions.

Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, put his full influence behind the tax measure and said he was confident that it, as well as the economy legislation, would be passed by a dominant non-partisan combination. The revenue bill was reported to the senate by the finance committee in the form agreed upon after a conference with Secretary of the Treasury Mills. It raises the income tax and corporation rates above the increases voted by the house.

SENATOR ROBINSON, Democratic leader of the senate, put forward his scheme for providing $2,300,000,000 for the relief of unemployment, and President Hoover indorsed it in principle. The President then outlined his own proposals in this line, under which the Reconstruction Finance corporation would loan not to exceed $1,500,000,000 for the various purposes contemplated. Of this amount, from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 would be loaned to states for the relief of unemployment distress and the remainder would be loaned to public and private agencies to aid in the financing of "income producing" construction projects.

To procure funds for this undertaking the Reconstruction Finance corporation would be authorized to sell debentures in the amount of $1,500,000,000. For this purpose its borrowing power would be increased to $3,000,000,000.

Neither the Robinson nor the Hoover plan was enthusiastically received by Democratic senators.

IN THE interests of economy and fairness to all civilians, President Hoover vetoed a bill providing hospitalization and the privileges of the soldiers' homes to civilians who served in the quartermaster corps during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection and the China relief expedition.

FRANCE'S elections and the assassination of President Doumer gave the republic a new chief executive and there will soon be a new premier. Albert Francois Lebrun was elected president and installed at once. Only a Communist and a Socialist opposed him, and he received 633 of the 824 votes in the joint session of the chamber of deputies and the senate. Premier Tardieu, whose support was riddled in the elections, immediately tendered his resignation, but was persuaded to hold on until about the first of June, when a new cabinet will be formed.

A. F. Lebrun

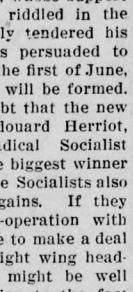
There is little doubt that the new premier will be Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical Socialist party, which was the biggest winner in the elections. The Socialists also made considerable gains. If they do not work in co-operation with Herriot, he may have to make a deal with the moderate right wing headed by Tardieu. It might be well again to call attention to the fact that Radical Socialists of France are really neither very radical nor actually Socialists, but are liberals with a program for the aid of agriculture, industry and commerce. It is not likely that there will be any decided change in France's international policies under Herriot.

OHIO'S primaries put that state into the wet column, and may mean that there will be a prohibition referendum plank in the Republican national platform.

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman easily won the Republican nomination for senator on an anti-prohibition platform, leading Louis J. Taber, dry, master of the National Grange, by about 55,000 votes. Next November Bettman will face Robert J. Buckley, wet Democratic incumbent, who was renominated without opposition.

Davis S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy for aeronautics, who made repeal his issue, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination from Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, dry, and his nearest opponent in a four-cornered race. Ingalls will run in November against Governor White, Democrat, who favors a prohibition referendum. The goveror will be the favorite son of the Ohio Democrats for the Presidential nomination.

MRS. HATTIE W. CARAWAY, senator from Arkansas—the only woman ever elected to the senate—has announced her candidacy for a full six-year term. The political leaders in her home state were surprised, and Gov. Harvey Parnell gave up his ambition to wear a toga, declaring he would retire from politics at the end of his term. However, Mrs. Caraway has plenty of opposition in the primary of August 9, for there are six other candidates for the Democratic nomination for senator. The winner, of course, will be elected in November. Some of her rivals are veterans in public office and prominent in state politics.



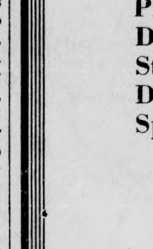
Sen. Caraway

The other day Vice President Curtis wished to leave the senate chamber, and he called Mrs. Caraway to the chair, thus making history, for never before had a woman presided over the senate. She sat in dignity but had nothing to do.

CARTER GLASS, the strenuous senator from Virginia, fighting to put through his banking reform bill, created something of a sensation by asserting that certain Chicago bankers, whom he did not name, had "hired some congressmen" to oppose the McFadden branch banking bill several years ago, and also had employed a skillful lobbyist at a high salary. He declined to name the congressmen, too. Representative Morton D. Hull of Illinois, who was active in opposing the McFadden bill in the behalf of the Chicago banks, would not discuss the Glass charges but indignantly denied having been hired. The lobbyist in question, E. N. Baty, said he acted as executive secretary of the Chicago and Cook County Bankers' association and received only his regular salary.

ALBERT B. FALL, former secretary of the interior, has served out his time in the New Mexico penitentiary and has returned to his ranch home at Three Rivers, N. M. To a reporter Mr. Fall declared that time would vindicate the naval oil reserve plans he made when in office and that were the cause of all his troubles. It only needed some war scare like the Sino-Japanese situation, he said, to teach the people the value of the Honolulu oil base which he championed.

GASTON B. MEANS was indicted by the grand jury in Washington on charges of having swindled Mrs. Edward B. McLean out of $104,000 by promising to procure the return of Colonel Lindbergh's baby. While the grand jurors were hearing that story, there came out a tale of another possible victim of Means, also a wealthy and prominent woman—Mrs. Finley Shepard of New York, the former Helen Gould.



Gaston B. Means

The Lindbergh baby did not figure in the alleged swindling of Mrs. Shepard. The story, hinted at by District Attorney Leo A. Rover while arguing over Means' bonds in the McLean affair, was that Means was paid by the New York woman after he represented that he could give her information on Communist activities which might threaten her daughter or her fortune.

LIEUT. AND MRS. MASSIE and Mrs. Fortescue sailed away from Honolulu, despite the efforts of the local authorities to make Mrs. Massie remain to testify in the second trial of the men accused of attacking her. Prosecutor J. C. Kelley declared himself determined to press the retrial, notwithstanding the absence of the complaining witness. He said if she did not appear in court on May 25 he would ask a warrant for her arrest, which, however, would be of no effect on the mainland.

SENATOR TASKER L. ODDIE of Nevada, Republican, brought upon himself the wrath of the Democrats and some of the Republicans

Sen. Oddie

It was brought out that Senator Oddie had taken it on himself as chairman of the appropriations subcommittee in charge of the treasury and post office bill to decide that a 10 per cent cut was "impossible." Senators Kenneth McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) and Carter Glass (Dem., Va.), both of whom have contended the savings could be made without discharging an employee, asserted that for two weeks Senator Oddie had refused to call the subcommittee together. When Mr. Oddie maintained it was his right to determine when the committee should meet he was heartily jeered.

MAJ. GEN. ENOCH CROWDER'S distinguished career came to an end with his death in Walter Reed hospital, Washington. The general, who was a legal expert, was the creator of the draft system used by the United States in the World war. He also was judge advocate general of the army and in 1917 was detailed as provost marshal general. In 1923 he was appointed ambassador to Cuba and resigned in 1927.

FULFILLING expectations, President Hoover veteoed the so-called Democratic tariff bill, which transferred from him to congress the power to make changes in tariff rates as recommended by the tariff commission. The roll was called in the house and it was found the proponents of the measure could not muster the two-thirds majority necessary to override the veto.

THERE is no longer any doubt as to Germany's intention concerning reparations. The reich does not mean to pay any more. First Chancellor Bruening in a public address declared Germany could not continue paying reparations, and explained at length why this was so. The next day Financial Minister Dietrich presented budget recommendations to the reichstag, and in them there was found no provision whatever for reparations payments, though $166,000,000 was ear-marked for interest and amortization on funded floating debts and reparations loans. The new budget is balanced at nearly $2,000,000,000.

THE FARMERS CORNER

By Ralph H. Taylor

The far-seeing eye must come to agriculture—the ability to dip far into the future and gauge, with fine certainty, exactly when production in major crops will reach the saturation point.

The farmer of the future will keep one eye on the weather and the other on a system of long-time crop forecasts which will give him ample warning against threatened over-production in any branch of his industry.

And his crop reporting service, in addition to anticipating conditions eight or ten years ahead, will carry exact data on production costs for every important crop in every important growing area—a practical guide to profitable crop selections.

While this prophesy may seem entirely improbable to many of California's hard-working farmers, who will immediately foresee the handicaps that weather, rainfall, plant pests and a dozen other elements of chance will place on such a system, the first steps already have been taken toward making the dream a reality.

Grasping the necessity for taking some of the "gamble" out of farming and bringing it into the realm of orderly development, based on the law of supply and demand, the National Conference of Land Utilization, recently held at Chicago, recommended immediate broadening of "outlook work" conducted by farm agencies of both the federal and state governments.

"It is imperative," the national farm conference reported, "that the program of outlook work of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State colleges be continued and expanded in order to provide a sound economic basis for planning the use of land for agricultural purposes, for determining the changes and adjustments of land use that will be required as economic conditions change, and for determining desirable readjustments in areas devoted to agriculture as a vital part of the outlook program."

Making its recommendation for long-time planning of farm operations, based on accurate analysis of changing conditions, the conference voted that:

"We recommend the preparation and publication at frequent intervals of national and local outlook reports containing unequivocal and understandable statements representing the best judgment of national, state and local outlook workers concerning the trend of supply and demand for the different agricultural commodities in the different parts of the country in the years ahead."

To curb unwise land expansion, one of the major contributing factors to farm ills, the agricultural leaders recommended that all land development enterprises be licensed and regulated; that no now colonization projects be undertaken through irrigation or drainage until they are justified by the agricultural needs of the nation, and that a national inventory be made of the country's land resources, with a classification of soils on the basis of their agricultural value.

Although it may seem as visionary to some as the airplane seemed to others, only a few years ago, there is increasing evidence that farming, within a short span of years, will cease to be a gamble and will become an intensively organized business.

While there must always, because of the inherent nature of the industry, be a considerable element of chance in almost any agricultural enterprise, it need not remain the dominant factor, as it is in many instances today.

Many successful farm co-operatives,m eeting constantly changing conditions with intelligent advertising, aggressive marketing and sound advice to their members on future production, afford the best evidence of the new order that is approaching.

Don't Overfeed Goldfish

Overfeeding is the commonest cause of death among goldfish. Feed them only every other day, and just what they will eat. At the start you will not know just how much to feed them for a meal. Therefore, remove the leftover food and feed less next time. You will soon learn by experience how much they should have each time. Too much feeding can be detected by the sluggish movements of the fish and a tendency for them to stay continually at the bottom of the aquarium.

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

Kiwanians were given an interesting colored slide display of Zion Park, Grand Canyon, and Bryce Canyon, by R. M. Ritchie, general agent of the Union Pacific, today.

These beautiful parks, the most colorful spots in the world, are national parks, controlled by the department of the interior. They are caused by the erosion of the vari-colored stratas during a period of thousands of years. The colors change almost hourly due to the angles of the sun's rays and the shadows of the formations. The Union Pacific system reaches these beauty spots by rail and bus line and Mr. Ritchie spreads the good news.

Lloyd Berry, our globe-trotting bachelor, acted as chairman. W. A. Newcomb of the St. Claire hotel will address the local club next week on "Hotel Business." George Robson, formerly of the famous Vendome hotel, will be chairman. Who will do the tipping on that day.

Both Schools Will Graduate Large Classes in June

Fifty-seven students will receive their diplomas from the Campbell Union High school at the graduation exercises to be held in the grammar school auditorium June 10. Dr. J. C. Elder, dean of the San Jose Junior college, has been secured as speaker for the occasion.

According to Ira Abbott of the grammar school, 40 students will be graduated from that school.

Fierce Tasmanian Wolf Doomed to Extinction?

The Tasmanian wolf is one of the rarest and most extraordinary beasts in the world. The species is said to be nearly extinct, and the few remaining specimens are rigorously protected. The first of the many extraordinary things about the Tasmanian wolf is that it is not a wolf at all, though it looks more like a wolf than anything else. The animal is really more akin to the kangaroo and wallabies, for it has a large pouch to carry the litter of young. Curiously enough, both the male and the female are equipped with one of these pouches. The Tasmanian wolf does not bark, but gives a series of wheezy coughs, and it is said that when pursued it will get up on its hind legs and jump like a kangaroo. They are fierce, and some years ago when they were plentiful there was a bonus of $25 offered for every head, because so much damage was done to sheep and cattle.

Seward's Ill Luck in '65

The surrender at Appomattox occurred on April 9, 1865. On the fifth day of April Secretary of State Seward had been thrown from a carriage. He was picked up unconscious with his jaw broken in two places and his shoulder dislocated. He had many other bruises and strains. His jaw was placed in an iron frame and he could speak with difficulty, if at all, for many days. He was still confined to his bed on the night of April 14 when Lincoln was assassinated, and when the attempt on his life was made; in fact, it was nearly a month before he was able to attend a cabinet meeting even in his own house.
